Archbishop's Easter Homily

Why do you seek the living one among the dead? He is not here... he has been raised. (Luke 24:5)

Over this week and next I will print an extract of the Archbishop's Easter Homily.

"My friends, in Holy Week we live anew—in ritual and symbol—the defining events of the life of Christ, not only to know them, but to make them our own; not merely to look at them, but to enter into them. Not just to recount what happened to our Lord, but to realise what happens to us. "Why do you seek the living among the dead? is far more a question about where we need to go and what we have to do, than a question about where we've come from. Amor Christi urget nos—the love of Christ empowers us to move forward (2 Cor 5:14)—is how St Paul captured the mystery into which we are called.

At the beginning of this week—on Palm Sunday—we read St Luke's account of the passion and death of our Lord.... The Lord's words are not only an expression of acceptance, but—like all his words—are words of prophecy. They reveal to us the nature of the world. "This is your hour, and the power of darkness." We live in the 'hour' of the oppressor, in a time when the "power of darkness" holds sway not only in Ukraine, but in many parts of our world. You don't need me to bring home to you the horror and darkness of these days ... the graves of the innocent victims butchered in this "repugnant war," and the victims of violence, despotism and hunger in so many other conflicts: let the horrors of recent weeks not blind us to the brutal conflicts in Yemen, or in Ethiopia.

"This is your hour, and the power of darkness," or as St John puts it, "and it was night" (John 13:30). It is night right now. And in this night, we gather to proclaim that darkness and its power do not have the last word. Our Easter candles and the Exultet—our Easter song—proclaim that the light of the risen Christ overcomes the darkness of sin and death. In these days when darkness and death appear to reign, let us consider afresh, the significance of our faith in Christ's victory over death, and its darkness, and what that means for how we live day-in-day out.

Saint Luke's passion account is a story of many encounters: Jesus meets the disciples, Pilate, Herod, and the women of Jerusalem. But one of the most extraordinary encounters must be that between Jesus and the two wrongdoers crucified along with him. These two are every one of us! The so-called 'bad' thief and the 'good' thief are in every person, in the hearts of every person of faith. While one berates him, the other—knowing that death is unavoidable—turns to Jesus with an extraordinary request, an extraordinary prayer: "Jesus, remember me when you come into your Kingdom" (23:42).

Jesus answers with an even more extraordinary promise, "Today, you will be with me in Paradise" (23:43). Today! Today—this day, April 16, 2022—is the still the day Jesus is crucified. Crucified in the streets and villages of Ukraine—but crucified also in the streets and alleys of Dublin. Christ is mocked and beaten today: mocked in the cynicism and apparent untouchability of those who take advantage of the poor and the vulnerable, who use the weakness and disadvantage of others for their advantage and gain. Beaten: beaten today, this very night... prisoners, hostages, women and children in their own homes, and women and children trafficked. Christ is crucified today, this very hour.

But Christ is also raised today! In this Vigil tonight and in our hearts, God says death and destruction, are not the last word. "Today you will be with me ..." are Jesus' words to the "good thief." And they are the Lord's words to us. The women went to the tomb to attend to the body of the one they loved. But the one they loved was not there. "Why do you seek among the dead the one who is alive? He is not here, but he has been raised." Trying to be faithful, we too return to where Jesus was. But he is not where he was! Christ has been raised, raised to life, raised into life, raised into our lives and into our hearts, raised into today.

The faithful Father has rescued his Son from the power of death, of darkness, and of sin. In rescuing him, He has rescued us—Christ's sisters and brothers. It is this that the "Good Thief" somehow sees. This is the hope he places in Jesus who is crucified with him. Not a vain, naïve hope that they will all be taken down from their crosses, but a true hope that death is not God's final word, that the darkness is not ultimate, and that violence, oppression, and sin do not hold sway.

This, my sisters and brothers, is the reality of the Resurrection. This Easter hope is the foundation and substance of our faith. (continued next week)

Children's Corner

In the Gospel The disciples have been fishing all night and not caught a single thing. A man on the shore tells them where to fish. They have so many fish they can't fit them all into their boat – now they know it is Jesus! Everyone shares a breakfast of fish and bread on the shore. Jesus tells Peter that if he loves him, he must look after his sheep

How many fish? Jesus helped his friends catch lots of fish. How many fish have they caught?

Fine food

Jesus cooked fish for the disciples.

Draw your favourite meal on the plate.

Good fish

Some of these fish would make Jesus happy. Can you draw a net to catch the good fish?

A Prayer to Say I love you, Jesus! Please help me to show you how much I love you by the way I treat my family and friends. Help me to be kind, loving and helpful today. Amen.

We welcome our recently Baptised

Jackson, Kai, Sonny & Evie

We remember our recently deceased
