Building Hope Prayer

Pilgrim God, we give you thanks and praise. You constantly journey with us even in our darkness and doubts. We seek your way of loving kindness to walk together as one family. Open our eyes to recognise you in the faces of one another, in the breaking of bread and in the splendour of your creation.

May the Risen Christ sow seeds of hope and new life deep within us. May our hearts and minds be filled with your Word bringing forth truth, justice and peace.

May the Holy Spirit working in and through us, do much more than we can dare to imagine as we live out our baptismal calling in humble and loving service.

We make this prayer through Christ Our Lord Amen.

St Laurence O' Toole: pray for us.
 St Brigid: pray for us.

Archbishop's Easter Homily (conclusion)

"This, my sisters and brothers, is the reality of the Resurrection. This Easter hope is the foundation and substance of our faith.

As St Paul said in the Second Reading, "We know that Christ, raised from the dead, dies no more; death no longer has power over him" (Rom 6:9). Christ is risen this very night. The Resurrection is today! The Cross is today, but Christ is also raised today! Christ comes to life in our lives! Christ lives in our hearts. "We were indeed buried with him through baptism," says Paul, "so that ...we too might live in newness of life" (Rom 6:4).

Christ's death is real. In his demeaning death, with all its horror, in its very annihilation, he embraced all that is dark and evil, all that is destructive and repulsive, and made it his own. "He descended into hell," as we pray in the Creed. In raising him from the dead, his Father and ours, grabs hold of him—and in him—grabs hold of us, and hauls him and us from our lowest depths, and brings us into life. God hauls us into life. It is like a birth, and as you know, birth—for all its wonder—is not neat and tidy. It is painful and messy. So it is with the life God gives us. Christ's passion and death took him to the lowest point of human existence, and from there, from that horrible place, the power of our faithful Father rescued him. Only God can do this. Only the Lord can save. Nobody can save themselves; this is what the "Good Thief" came to see! In refusing to meet evil with evil, in refusing to run from death, Jesus reveals the gentle, enduring, life-giving power of God, the God whose love is stronger than death (Song of Songs 8:6), the God whose power is revealed in weakness (2 Cor 12:9, cf. 1 Cor 1:17, 25).

This is our hope. This is our faith. In bringing Christ out of Hell, God brings us with him: out of all our hells: out of the hell of Bucha and the shameless murder of its defenceless people, out of the hell of slavery and trafficking, out of the hell of addiction and crime. This is the doorway to life—the narrow door of which Jesus speaks (Luke 13:24). It is no mere doctrine! It is the call to life, and its promise. It is the power to live in another way. It is power, because we are no longer alone. Christ now lives in our hearts and among us (Luke 17:21, cf. Gal 2:20). Through the Holy Spirit, God creates community among us—we who are fickle and frail; we who are sinners. The Spirit of the Risen Christ, poured into our hearts, overcomes our divisions, and draws us into mutual acceptance and forgiveness. This is the work of our faith, the road we are called to travel: a road, not of domination, but of service, a road of courage—which dares to say how things really are, a road of endurance—which stays true to what we've promised, a road of engagement that's not afraid of disapproval or disdain, a road that knows what love is—and love's cost, and a road that knows its limits, that has learned reliance on God. A road that is made real for us in how we now welcome our sisters and brothers from Ukraine. Welcoming the stranger is the Resurrection in action! Let us remember that the support of the State and NGOs is no replacement for the concreteness and warmth of our love. A welcome centre is a shelter, but not a home. You see, the Resurrection is not the end of Christ's road, but the beginning of the second part of his journey (see Luke 24:13–53): the journey home to God, the journey home to us, and our journey home to each other, a journey without end: eternal life itself (see John 17:3).

On this Easter Night, may the Light shine—not just from our Easter candles, but from deep within our hearts—with its healing, its hope. May it brighten our way to each other, may it conquer our fear and mellow our harshness. May the power of the One whom God hauled out of death, bring us safely home.

We remember our recently deceased
